A Legacy of Ore, Opportunity, and Elk.

Tucked within the rugged beauty of Radarsburg, MT, this historic mining parcel—home to the Red Wing Lode MS 3180 and Elgin Lode MS 3181—offers more than just striking views and the potential for mineral exploration. It offers a story.

Once part of Montana's booming mining engine, this ground quite literally helped fuel the war effort—pulling valuable minerals from the earth during a time when the nation needed every ounce of strength. From copper to silver to tales of gold dust whispered over campfires, this land has seen pickaxes, perseverance, and profit.

Today, its spirit remains just as rich. While the old headframes may have quieted, the land continues to yield value—for outdoorsmen, history lovers, and legacy investors alike. Surrounded by forested slopes and wild terrain, the parcel sits in a curated hunting district known for robust elk populations, mule deer sightings, and the kind of quiet that only comes when you're off-grid and miles from ordinary life.

And let's face it—this place rocks.
(Yes, we went there. And yes, the geology supports that joke.)

?? Property Highlights:

Historic mining claims with documented mineral activity

Part of Montana's mining boom that supported the U.S. war effort
