N/A, Potomac, MT

Untamed refuge deep in the heart of Montana’s wild country. Twenty acres of nearly level ground where timber meets pasture and the game trails wind through like whispers of the wilderness itself. State land wraps around on three sides, opening into thousands of acres of nearly untouched hunting ground—land where elk bugle at dawn and whitetail melt into the timber at dusk.

Come by foot or horseback in the warmth of summer, or glide across the frozen drifts on your snow machine when winter claims the hills. The gated roadbed leads you easily into a landscape that feels endless, framed by sweeping views and a silence that only wild country knows.

And if your heart still wants more room to roam, the adjoining 20-acre tract stands waiting—ready to be part of your own boundless Montana hunting retreat.
